Best Care for Patients Achieved Through Multidisciplinary Stewardship

TO THE EDITOR—The recent white paper from Ostrowsky et al [1] highlights the need for strengthening the role and support for infectious diseases (ID) physicians in antimicrobial stewardship programs. However, in identifying ID physicians as uniquely qualified for these functions, the authors fail to acknowledge the essential leadership and skill set of ID pharmacists in stewardship. Strong leadership is not limited to a single profession, and all leaders or coleaders of stewardship should be recognized and supported in their roles.

Infectious diseases pharmacists are dedicated to achieving the goals of the National Action Plan for Combating Antibiotic-Resistant Bacteria to implement the Core Elements of Antibiotic Stewardship from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in all acute care hospitals [2]. Since the 1980s, pharmacist-led and co-led antimicrobial stewardship programs have demonstrated improved outcomes [3, 4], and ID pharmacists are well qualified for these roles through rigorous clinical training that requires domains of antimicrobial stewardship expertise, skill and leadership to benefit patient outcomes and safety [5].

The recent stewardship guidelines published by the Infectious Diseases Society of America and the Society for Healthcare Epidemiology of America and endorsed by the Society of Infectious Diseases Pharmacists, promote coleadership by ID physicians and pharmacists [6]. We are consistent in our support of this model as best practice. We also recognize the need to embrace opportunities for alternative models of non-ID led stewardship programs, such as hospitalists and generalist pharmacists, when necessary [7]. Independent of the leadership model used, pharmacists and physicians supporting stewardship should be appropriately compensated for their time and expertise.

All healthcare professionals must be engaged in stewardship to improve patient outcomes and safety and decrease antimicrobial resistance [8–10]. Best care for patients is achieved through multidisciplinary stewardship, where pharmacist leaders are key to success.

Note

Potential conflicts of interest. E. L. H. reports a grant from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, paid to her institution. E. E. C. serves on the speakers bureau of Merck and previously served on the advisory board of Allergan. All other authors report no potential conflicts. All authors have submitted the ICMJE Form for Disclosure of Potential Conflicts of Interest. Conflicts that the editors consider relevant to the content of the manuscript have been disclosed.

5 WAYS PHARMACISTS CAN BE ANTIBIOTICS AWARE

SIDP is committed to the #GlobalAMRChallenge and will promote the appropriate use of antibiotics by:

- Expanding global stewardship provider education in acute and long-term care settings
- Providing antibiotic stewardship certificate programs
- Securing commitments from U.S. acute care hospitals to adopt the stewardship practices outlined in pharmacy action posters, a collaboration between CDC, SIDP and the American Society of Health-System Pharmacists
- Advancing public knowledge and awareness of appropriate handling of antibiotics by sponsoring an Antibiotic Take Back Day campaign in partnership with community pharmacies

Penicillin Allergy

Approximately 10% of the population in the United States reports a penicillin allergy, less than 1% truly penicillin-allergic.¹ Obtain a more detailed history of the penicillin reaction and review previously documented reactions. Alert the provider of your findings and recommend alternative antibiotic therapy as appropriate.

Empiric Coverage

Empiric coverage is unnecessary in most cases. Obtain a culture before receiving antibiotic orders for two or more patients with anaerobic infection. Alert the provider that the antibiotics have overlapping spectra of activity.

Anti-MRSA Coverage

Obtain a medical chart review for evidence of MRSA infection, including cultures, rapid diagnostic tests, and/or MRSA nasal screening.³ Alert the provider to consider discontinuation of anti-MRSA agents.

Management of Asymptomatic Bacteriuria

Asymptomatic bacteriuria should not be treated with antibiotics in most cases.⁴ Obtain a urine culture if signs and symptoms consistent with urinary tract infection when appropriate. Alert the provider of your findings and/or making treatment recommendations.

Antibiotic Duration

Shorter antibiotic durations are available for common infectious diseases such as bacterial meningitis, bacterial pneumonia, and skin and soft tissue infection.^{5,6,7} Alert the provider of your findings and/or making treatment recommendations. Alert the provider if the total days of inpatient and/or outpatient antibiotic therapy exceeds the recommended duration.

Pharmacist Led Actions to Support Antimicrobial Stewardship: An Advocacy Opportunity

SIDP aims to improve antimicrobial use and combat antimicrobial resistance across the continuum of human health care. Our goal is to reach both hospitals with robust stewardship programs and those with limited stewardship resources through members' existing relationships with local, regional and national pharmacy and stewardship collaborations

One method to achieve this goal is the promotion and adoption of CDC-ASHP-SIDP co-branded pharmacy action posters in acute care hospitals. These posters serve to provide education to clinicians and patients in addition to demonstrating commitment to these best practices in acute care hospitals throughout the United States.
