Infectious Diseases Pharmacists Day

The Inaugural Infectious Diseases (ID) Pharmacists Day will be held on May 22, 2021 – marking the 30 year anniversary of the Society of Infectious Diseases Pharmacists (SIDP). This day recognizes the importance of ID pharmacists in promoting appropriate antibiotic use and the contributions they make to patient care, education, and research. The ACCP ID PIN and MAD-ID are also partnering with SIDP on this event.

2021 Theme: "Essential COVID-19 Healthcare Workers"

Antimicrobial Stewardship Advocacy Toolkit

About

SIDP promotes the role of pharmacists as team providers and patient therapy are all through providers and patient medications we use.

The toolkit below covers stewardship and education.

Vancomycin AUC Toolkit

Vancomycin AUC Toolkit

SIDP has developed a Vancomycin AUC Toolkit, informed by the experiences of pharmacists who have implemented AUC-guided dosing at their institutions.

Toolkit Features:

Home > SIDP Educates > COVID-19 Monoclonal Antibody Toolkit

COVID-19 Monoclonal Antibody Toolkit

COVID-19 Monoclonal Antibody Toolkit

SIDP has developed a COVID-19 Monoclonal Antibody (mAb) Toolkit, informed by the experiences of pharmacists who have implemented mAb infusions for COVID-19 patients at their institutions.

Toolkit Features:

- Tools to guide development of a mAb infusion process, regardless of infusion site (e.g., Emergency Department, integrated infusion center, freestanding infusion center)
- Information on available mAb products and compounding guidance
- Resources for nursing, providers, and patients
- Specific guidance on use of mAbs in pediatric patients

Lynn Wardlow, PharmD, BCPS-AQID, BCIDP

"Dr. Lynn Wardlow is a crucial and key member of our ID Fellowship. In addition to always being available for clinical questions, she has been a mentor on their ID Fellowship research projects; has designed an interactive ASP curriculum which allows for weekly journal clubs, as well as topic discussions on aminoglycoside and vancomycin dosing and monitoring, and treatment of multidrug resistant pathogens.

She is a phenomenal mentor and educator to our ID Fellows and I am grateful she is a part of their training!"

Happy #SIDPMemberMondays Dr. Wardlow!

Vancomycin Area Under the Curve to Predict Timely Clinical Response in the Treatment of Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus Complicated Skin and Soft Tissue Infections

Introduction. Although recent guidelines have recommended monitoring vancomycin (VAN) area under the curve (AUC)/minimum inhibitory concentration (MIC) to ensure clinical efficacy and minimize toxicity in methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) for various infections, there are no recommendations regarding complicated skin and soft tissue infections (cSTIs). We aimed to evaluate the association between VAN AUC and clinical outcomes in MRSA cSTIs.

Methods. This was a retrospective cohort study of adult patients treated with ≥72 hours of VAN for MRSA cSTI from 2008 to 2013 at Detroit Medical Center. The primary outcome was timely clinical success (TCS) defined as (1) resolution of signs and symptoms of infection within 72 hours, (2) stabilization and/or reduction in lesion size, (3) alternative agents not required due to VAN failure or toxicity as elected by the prescribing clinician. Classification and regression tree (CART) analysis was performed to determine the AUC associated with TCS in the cohort. Multivariable logistic regression was used to evaluate the association between VAN AUC and the primary outcome.

Results. A total of 154 patients were included in this analysis. CART identified an AUC ≥435 mg·hr/L for TCS. Overall, 66.9% of patients experienced TCS; 69.7% in the target-AUC group versus 52.5% in the below-target AUC group ($P = .013$). Target-AUC attainment was independently associated with increased odds of TCS (adjusted odds ratio [aOR], 2.208; 95% confidence interval [CI], 1.047–4.659).

Conclusions. In adults treated with VAN for MRSA cSTI, target-AUC attainment was independently associated with improved clinical outcomes and maybe most warranted for patients at high risk of VAN failure or VAN-associated toxicity.

Keywords. vancomycin; skin and soft tissue; gram-positive infections.

The 2020 consensus guidelines for therapeutic monitoring of vancomycin (VAN) recommends a target VAN area under the concentration curve (AUC) of 400–600 mg·hr/L for serious methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) infections, assuming a minimum inhibitory concentration (MIC) of 1 mg/L and no longer recommends the use of trough monitoring [1]. The AUC can be calculated utilizing a Bayesian-derived approach or first-order pharmacokinetic (PK) analytical equations [1, 2]. The switch to an AUC monitoring method has been associated with significantly less VAN-induced acute kidney injury (AKI) than a trough-based approach [1, 2]. Although an AUC-based monitoring approach has been evaluated in a variety of infections including endocarditis, bacteremia, pneumonia, and bone/joint infections, it had not been well investigated in complicated skin and soft tissue infections (cSTIs) [3–6]. This may be due to the fact that patients treated for cSTIs typically receive less intensive VAN monitoring, are switched to oral therapy earlier, and therefore are assumed to have a relatively low observed incidence of VAN-associated AKI [3, 7, 8]. Consequently, patients with cSTIs have historically been managed in clinical studies using conventional dosing; typically, initially 15mg/kg ABW with doses in the range of 1000–1500 mg every 12 hours and monitoring using a trough only approach. However, VAN-associated AKI in cSTIs are commonplace, particularly in high-risk patients [7]. Recent data demonstrate that the incidence in cSTIs can be as high as 9%. In fact, each additional day of VAN therapy beyond day 3 has been shown to increase the odds of VAN-associated AKI by 14.3%. These considerations emphasize the need to identify the optimal AUC target for effectiveness and safety in cSTIs. In addition,

Young Investigator Award

The purpose of this award is to:

- Recognize past research accomplishments
- Reward young investigators who show research promise in the broad area of infectious diseases

Preference is given to independent research work conducted after completion of terminal education and training. Nominees are evaluated on research funding, publication record, leadership, teaching and honors or awards received for their research.

2021 Young Investigator Award

Melanie Nicol

Gita Patel Award

This purpose of this award:

- Recognize an SIDP member who has implemented and documented the impact of an innovative or collaborative “best practice” initiative to improve care in patients with infectious diseases

Preference is given to pharmacists providing patient care in the community setting and to those that do not receive salary support dedicated to research.

2021 Gita Patel Award

Outstanding Clinical Practice in Infectious Diseases Pharmacotherapy Award

The purpose of this award is recognize a pharmacist with exemplary skills as a practitioner and a demonstrated expertise in infectious diseases pharmacy practice

Areas of contribution to infectious diseases pharmacotherapy may include, but are not limited to, development of innovative services, documentation of benefits, and methods of promoting the safe, effective, and rational use of anti-infective agents.
